How It All Started

In 1998, brothers Eli and Wasfi Samaan agreed to re-open a failed bowling center at the request of a bank in Jessamine County, Kentucky. At the time, neither of them even knew how to keep a bowling score. They immediately hired a prior manager out of retirement. Eventually, the Samaans completely renovated the center and added enough square footage to open a full-service restaurant.

Having a variety of businesses in the small town of Nicholasville, Wasfi and Eli realized that a casual dining restaurant, sports bar and family entertainment center were missing in this small town. They have created a fun, clean and vibrant facility that everyone can use. The name was originally Legends -- the J.D. which stands for Jordanian descent added later to reflect the owners' proud heritage. The finished product has been a big success with Jessamine County residents.

In 2003, the same approach was applied in the very similar area of Franklin, Ohio. J.D. Legends and Strike Zone Lanes have received national and international recognition in the bowling industry. Welcome to where food and fun come together.
